Commemorate Memorial Day

'Theodore Roosevelt at San Juan Hill'

Monday, May 29, 2017 at Noon

July 1, 1898 was a momentous date in American history. It was the day that the Battle of San Juan Hill was fought during the Spanish–American War. This decisive battle would serve to launch Colonel Theodore Roosevelt on a meteoric path to the presidency. Sadly, although a victory for the United States, the battle resulted in 205 U.S. soldiers killed and 1,180 wounded.

On Memorial Day, in honor of our nation's armed forces, a National Park Service ranger will conduct a thirty-minute, multimedia program about T.R. and his 'Rough Riders' regiment, through maps, archival images, sound recordings, silent film clips, anecdotes and biographies about Theodore, his troops, and the fateful battle.

Space is limited for this program and reservations are required to participate. Admission is free. Please call (212) 260-1616 to speak with a representative. Reservations via voicemail or e-mail will not be honored. All participants must be accompanied by an adult. House tours are offered separately by same-day sign-up.
